DRUG TRAFFIC

IN 1959, the Hongkong Government published a White Paper dealing with the various aspects of the narcotic traffic in the Colony.

This paper set out in concise form not only a report of what the Government was doing to put down the narcotic dealer, but what steps were being taken to rehabilitate the unfortunate victims of this nefarious trade.

Now another White Paper is to hand which forms a progress report covering the period November 1959 to October 1960.

Government states that the battle is very far from being won. That fact is well known, but on the other hand there is much cause for congratulation, or at least, a put on the back.

IN the first place, Government has stepped up punishment for the dealer. Where at one time they were banished (only too often to find their way back here) Government has now imposed prison sentences.

Government makes no secret of the difficulty of putting down the narcotics trade. Hongkong is a non-opium-producing country, therefore all drugs have to be imported. But...with so much sea traffic and a long and tortuous coast line, it is impossible to cover every section of the area efficiently.

Nevertheless, the seizures of illegal drugs by the Preventive Service was far from modest. The Police have also done a good job by raiding the very places where the traffickers, taking into consideration the difficulty of the terrain, imagined themselves safe.

THE rehabilitation centres have also met with success. The victims were treated not as offenders but as victims of a vile traffic. They were housed, fed, and set to healthy work. The results are definitely encouraging.

But Government has no hesitation in claiming that what is needed is a stronger public opinion against narcotics. The Chinese have always abhorred the narcotics vice and its demoralising consequences.

The Chinese Press has been unstinting in its praise of what Government is doing to defeat the trafficker and restore the victim to society.

But in spite of the fact that Government has used the services of the Press and radio, and conducted an advertising campaign, public opinion is still too passive.

PERHAPS among the people who live in the areas where the victims of the drug trade live, there is a fear of informing. Certainly this fear is not groundless, for the traffickers and their tools are ruthless, far removed from fear of any punishment that a humane Government will impose.

Government has stepped up punishment, but when it makes that punishment such that the trafficker is afraid, then the informer need no longer fear the consequences of his public spirited action. Government will then receive more co-operation from the potential victims of the drug dealer.

This is a war. There can be no quarter. And every citizen of any worth will back Government up to the hilt in its endeavour to stamp out this traffic.

Demonstrations against compromise with rebels VIOLENCE ERUPTS IN ALGERIA

Rifle butts and bricks used in riot

Oran, May 26.

French police and a mob of European settlers clashed on Thursday night in mid-town Oran in a renewal of demonstrations against any compromise with the Algerian nationalist rebels.

About a dozen persons were injured, including four policemen who had to be sent to a hospital after being struck by stones or bricks hurled by the demonstrators.

Police fought back with rifle butts and police sticks, sending about eight of the Europeans to a hospital for treatment. Authorities said several persons were arrested, but they did not give an exact number.

Darkened

It was the eighth night running that European crowds have demonstrated against President Charles De Gaulle's policy of negotiating with the rebels at Evian-les-Bains.

The mob broke into and sacked two Moslem grocery stores, and set fire to another Moslem shop. Police, backed up by riot troops, fired a barrage of tear gas grenades into the crowd to break it up.

The clash took place in a darkened sector where all the street lamps have been shattered in similar demonstrations earlier this week. At the height of the clash the neighbourhood was rocked by the explosion of a plastic bomb in front of a Moslem doctor's home.

Reports from Algiers said rebel terrorism claimed 14 lives and wounded an equal number of persons in the past 24 hours.

Near Sidi-Aich, three French soldiers were slain in an operation against a rebel band which earlier attacked the army post at Sidi-Aich.—AP.

Colonel's threat to shoot general

CHANG LED

REVOLT AT

GUNPOINT

Tokyo, May 25. Well-informed diplomatic sources here tonight identified the man who forced Lieutenant-general Chang Do Young at gunpoint to lead the May 16 South Korea coup d'etat as Colonel Lee Jong Pal, 36.

They said Lee, who is chief of the training section, Military Operations Branch (G3) was now under arrest in Mapo Prison in Seoul for his action.

The sources said they believed Lee had played a crucial part in ensuring the success of the coup as Chang's attitude to the coup d'etat, which had been engineered by Major General Pak Hung Hui, was then not certain.

A VISIT

Colonel Lee called on General Chang at army headquarters at 1540 local on May 16, exactly 12 hours and 10 minutes after the coup had started.

He was accompanied by another Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel, who also pressed General Chang for a "yes or no" answer on his attitude to the coup. Neither of these were under arrest because they had not pulled guns on Chang.

First news of this background story of the coup d'etat was published this week by an American news magazine. The magazine was held up by censorship yesterday but distribution was permitted today.—Router.

EIGHT DIE

Johannesburg, May 25. Eight people were killed today in an explosion above ground at Coalbrook North Coalmine in the northern part of the Orange Free State. An underground subsidence in the Clydesdale Mine at Coalbrook on January 21, 1960, killed 437 miners.—Reuter.

STOCK EXCHANGE ARRESTS

New York, May 25.

Two expelled American Stock Exchange specialists, the father-son team of Jerry and Gerard, were arrested today on charges of violating the securities and exchange act of 1934.

These were the first arrests ordered by the government in its current investigation of the American Stock Exchange.—UPI.

6,000 homeless, one dead in S'pore blaze

Singapore, May 25.

Six thousand people were today officially estimated left homeless after last night's disastrous fire — the biggest in Singapore's history which swept over a region of roughly five square miles.

Four schools have been closed for a fortnight to provide temporary shelter for the homeless.

A police spokesman at a press conference this morning adjusted the casualty list to one dead (and not two as given by police earlier) and one missing while the General Hospital recorded treating 61 outpatients yesterday afternoon and last night for burns and other minor injuries.

No patients were actually admitted to hospital, the police spokesman said. Saved by almost the entire fire-fighting forces on the island, were blocks of flats erected by government for those left homeless after a similar but smaller fire which swept almost the same area in 1959.

Looting

The triangular fire area was being patrolled by armed police and troops of the British and Singapore armed forces, while police said they were investigating reports of looting.

Only a slight pall of white smoke and steam hung over the fire area which was strewn with the black skeletons of brick and concrete shops, factories and storehouses.

The majority of the buildings had been wood and thatch. They appeared as nothing more than old smouldering beams this morning.

Two oil mills, three timber yards and three motor workshops were among the buildings destroyed.—Reuter.

THE NEW LOOK

Many progressive firms are these days replacing outmoded provident schemes with up to date group insurance and retirement contracts.

The undermentioned are a few of over 70 organizations in Hong Kong alone which have introduced such schemes to the mutual advantage of both employer and employee.

BETTY

PASSES HK

Typhoon Betty passed at noon today about 430 miles east of Hongkong, said the Royal Observatory.

It was moving north at 10 knots and was expected to recurve, passing to the east of Taiwan.

Typhoon Betty is forecast to be near 24.5 degrees north and 124.5 east at 9 am tomorrow.

Pressure remains low over the Paracels.

DEATH OF FORMER RESIDENT

Mr W. J. GEALL

Mr William (Bill) James Geall, former engineer in charge of Kowloon for the Hongkong Telephone Co Ltd, died in Sydney on May 16.

He was 62. Born in England on June 25, 1899, Mr Geall spent almost three decades in the Colony. He came to Hongkong in 1927 and joined the Telephone Co as an engineer.

Earlier, he was with the Post Office in England.

MARRIED

When he retired from the Telephone Co in November, 1955, he was the engineer in charge of Kowloon.

He was married and had one daughter.

While here, the late Mr Geall was the past President of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club.

Mr Geall was the past District Grand Master of Mark Masonry, English Constitution and past Grand Deacon of the Grand Lodge of England.

He is survived by his widow and daughter in Sydney.

SEQUEL TO SOCCER DEMONSTRATION

Magistrate tells a father to cane young rioter

A Magistrate this morning released a teenaged student involved in the mob demonstration following the soccer match between the Combined Chinese and the visiting English FA teams, providing the father of the youth "administers a sound caning."

Two young students appeared before Mr D. Benson at the Juvenile Court, Causeway Bay, today charged with disorderly conduct following the match, which took place at the Government Stadium in Sookmoo on May 23. They were found guilty.

Mr Benson, in releasing the first defendant to the custody of his parents, ordered him bound over in the sum of $200 to be of good behaviour for two years.

The Magistrate reserved judgment on the second youth until Monday pending a character testimonial from his schoolmaster.

AT NIGHT

Prosecuting Inspector H. V. Brown said that at about 11.15 pm on May 23 a large unruly crowd gathered outside the Stadium after the match.

Police reinforcements were called and attempts were then made to disperse the crowd along the various roads leading to the Stadium, he added.

Mr Brown told the court that at the junction of Caroline Hill-road and Cotton-path a crowd of people were throwing stones and overturning refuse bins. Defendants were seen by Assistant Commissioner C. P. Sutcliffe throwing stones and acting in a disorderly manner.

In passing sentence Mr Benson said he was satisfied with the evidence that a nuisance had been committed and hence found both boys guilty.

"This is very serious, as it's the second time that there has been a football riot," he added. The two students are the sons

Chinese students did exam papers for friends—and failed

Sydney, May 25.

Two Chinese university students took the places of two of their younger countrymen at final secondary school examinations — and failed, it was learnt here today.

The police and education departments announced this today following investigations by detectives of acts of high school leaving certificate exam papers, on which they found four different handwriting styles.

According to the authorities today, the Chinese university students did seven examination papers for their friends, who did the remainder themselves.

The two students are the sons of wealthy Singapore parents who wanted them educated in Australia. They now face possible deportation, police said.

The Director-General of Education in New South Wales, Dr H. W. Wyndham, today refused to tell reporters what originally aroused the suspicions of the examiners.

Dr Wyndham said a criminal investigation branch scientific bureau handwriting expert, called in when examiners' suspicions were aroused, compared the papers with the writing on application forms and attendance vouchers.

"He proved conclusively that there had been impersonations," Dr Wyndham said. The handwriting expert and the education authorities are believed to be sifting more examination papers to find evidence of any further cheating.—China Mail Special.

Sihanouk suggests Communist take-over inevitable SHOCK AT LAOS CONFERENCE

Disillusioned with Geneva deadlock

Geneva, May 25.

The leading sponsor of the Geneva conference on Laos, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Chief of State of Cambodia, tonight startled delegates at the bogged-down talks by issuing a pessimistic press statement suggesting that the communisation of Laos was inevitable.

The conference was in recess today, but delegates were conferring among themselves on how to get the meetings started fruitfully again, when Prince Norodom's declaration became known.

The Prince, who has devoted unceasing efforts to reconciling the three rival Princes who represent right-wing, neutral and pro-Communist political factions, left Geneva for a medical rest cure of 15 to 20 days in France, disillusioned with the stalemate at Geneva and in Laos.

Before driving away from the lakeside conference city, Prince Norodom made a new suggestion—the creation of a neutral belt of independent, disengaged and non-aligned countries in South-east Asia, unlinked with either East or West.

This belt, he proposed, should extend from the Mekong to the Indus Rivers, and include Cambodia, Thailand, Burma and India.

Frankly

Thailand is now frankly pro-Western, while Cambodia, Burma and India are neutrals. Prince Norodom left Laos out of his list of potential members of the neutral belt, indicating that its communisation was now becoming inevitable.

The Cambodian leader has expressed regret that the Laotians could not get together on a unified, neutral government.

Without pre-judging the attitude Thailand might now adopt, the Prince said that country had every interest in disengaging itself from the eight-nation Seato, which he felt had become inoperable since the latest developments in the Laotian crisis.

Rocked

The Cambodian Chief of State said the West would have nothing to lose and everything to gain by letting Thailand take some distance from the Western bloc, while at the same time not giving up Western aid and support.

"Everything depends on the wisdom of the Thai leaders," he remarked.

Thailand belongs to Seato, along with the US, UK, France, New Zealand, Australia, Pakistan and the Philippines.

Prince Norodom indicated he felt Thailand would be the next object of Communist threat.

The Cambodian suggestion rocked conference circles at a moment when the co-chairmen of the 14-nation meeting, Mr Malcolm MacDonald of Britain and Mr George Fushkin of the Soviet Union, were in a huddle about the conference's work.

The co-chairmen's meeting was said to have dealt exclusively with the question of a reply to the International Control Commission report dated May 20 and released last night.

This report asked the co-chairmen for further instructions on the Commission's future work.

There was no agreement on a reply, and the question remains open. The co-chairmen were consulting their respective governments.

No date was set by the co-chairmen for the next plenary session of the conference.

A British spokesman said tonight that the disengagement of the two co-chairmen on a reply to the ICC was "an important factor in holding up the work of the conference".

Important

He said that if the ICC felt that it needed further instructions, "obviously that is very important for the continuation of their work. We feel that some action should be taken and instructions sent as requested. We should send a substantive reply".

The co-chairmen have also received a reply to their request to the ICC for an inventory of Commission needs in equipment and facilities, but this was described by the British spokesman as simply "a nuts and bolts document" and has not yet been released. —AFP.

Robert Kennedy to talk on radio More racial protests

White, Negro demonstrators are arrested

Montgomery, Alabama, May 25.

Sheriff Mac Sim Butler arrested 10 Negro and White men when they sat down together at a "Whites only" bus station snack bar here today in the latest demonstration against racial segregation in the Deep South.

The demonstrators were four white professors from New England Universities, three Negro students, and three Alabama Negro Ministers.

Shortly afterwards another Negro Minister, the Rev. S. S. Seay, was shot in the wrist by teenage White youths.

Mr Seay is a leader of the fight against segregation in Montgomery, scene of vicious race violence last weekend when Whites beat up a group of Negro and White "Freedom Riders" when they arrived by bus to challenge the segregation rules in Southern bus depots.

FEDERAL MARSHALS

Mr Robert Kennedy, Federal Attorney-General, today withdrew all but 100 of the 600 Federal Marshals he sent to Montgomery after the weekend violence.

He said the actions of the Alabama National Guard and State Police and assurances by Alabama politicians had influenced his decision.

Two leaders of the "Freedom Riders" said in New York today there would be no "cooling off" in the anti-segregation demonstrations. This was in reply to the Attorney-General's call yesterday for "restraint".

Mr Robert Kennedy will broadcast over Voice of America tomorrow on the racial situation.

COURT CASE

The four professors and three students arrested in Montgomery today were following the busloads of "Freedom Riders" who were arrested yesterday in Jackson, Mississippi.

The demonstrators—25 Negroes and two Whites—are expected to appear in court tomorrow on charges of breach of the peace and disobeying a police officer.

In New Orleans, Mr George Lincoln Rockwell, the American Nazi Party leader arrested last night with his nine followers while on a "hate" tour of the Deep South, vowed today to remain in jail instead of applying for bail.—Reuters.

A CHALLENGE MET
£1,000 from 'X'
—and Jadwiga
has a new life

The 17,000 people of Berkhamsted, Hertfordshire, were challenged by a person known only as "X". "Find a deserving girl and I'll give £1,000 to start a fund for her future."

The town took up the challenge, and so eight-year-old Jadwiga Gorzdzowska, a Polish-born child who has known no home but refugee camps until now became its "elvie child."

For the next 10 years Berkhamsted will play father and mother to Jadwiga. She will be educated, clothed, given holidays, birthday and Christmas presents. After that initial £1,000 the town launched a fund, £500 has come in, and more donations are still arriving.

"Enough," said Councillor Smith, "for us to give Jadwiga a really happy childhood and then launch her into the world at 18 with £200 or £300."

Jadwiga was settling into her new home in Miss Pauline Pidgeon's 400-year-old cottage at neighbouring Wigginton the other day, and practising her first English words: "Thank you," said Mr William Ham-

West Germany accepts UK training offer

London, May 25.

West Germany today was reported to have accepted a British offer to let German forces use training grounds in South Wales.

Informed diplomats said the offer was accepted by Bonn Defence Minister Franz Joseph Strauss during discussions with British officials in London.

Strauss flew back to Bonn today. The major product of his discussions was a list of arms deal in which West Germany agreed to buy more than 50 million dollars worth of British 105 mm tank guns.—AP.

Soldiers danced at wedding of Hussein, Toni —AND THE GUESTS CRIED 'MABRUK'

Amman, May 25.

Soldiers danced in the streets to the music of military bands here tonight to celebrate King Hussein's marriage to an English girl, Muna El Hussein.

A 21-gun salute boomed out from the hill surrounding Amman as the golden-haired bride—Toni Avril Gardiner—whispered the few words of Arabic which made her the wife of Jordan's King.

As the 23 close friends and diplomats who attended the simple ceremony cried "Mabruk" (congratulations), the King kissed his bride.

Muna, 20-year-old daughter of a British Army Colonel, wore a plain blue linen dress without jewellery. Her head was covered by a white chiffon scarf. The King wore a grey lounge suit and grey tie.

THE PARTY

Later the bride changed into her white wedding gown before attending a tea party given by the Queen Mother. The simple 15-minute Islamic ceremony in an Arabian Night hilltop palace was the climax of a hectic month for the bride. (She became a Muslim last month, shortly before her engagement was announced. Then she took the name of Muna El Hussein (Hussein's choice). Today she became his Consort, but not his Queen. The King said yesterday his bride shared his indifference to the "superficial passing show of life" and that he wanted her to be known only by her adopted Arabic name "without any title or decoration or position." After a black-robed judge had performed the marriage service and offered his congratulations, there was a small reception before the Royal Couple drove through the streets of Amman to be greeted by the people.—Reuters.

Chilean naval vessel enters Sydney Harbour

Sydney, May 25.

Thousands of people lined Sydney Harbour foreshores and the heads today to watch the arrival of the Chilean naval training barquentine, Esmeralda. The ship made an impressive spectacle as it passed through the heads soon after 10 am. Clouds of smoke drifted on the light breeze as it gave a 21-gun salute and the shore battery at North Head replied.

But the ship disappointed the crowd by entering under power instead of under canvas. Esmeralda is the biggest sailing ship to visit Sydney for more than 50 years.—China Mail Special.

'STERILE', HE SAYS

Lord Home criticises doctrine of apartheid

Lisbon, May 25.

Lord Home, the British Foreign Secretary, said tonight that British and Portuguese theories of colonial government were "based on respect for the human personality; both reject racialism."

Lord Home, speaking at a dinner given by the Portuguese Foreign Minister, Dr Alberto Franco Nogueira, shortly after his arrival here on a three-day official visit, said neither theory had anything in common with "the sterile doctrine of apartheid."

After expressing "our deep sympathy over the tragic events which are taking place in Angola," Lord Home said the common responsibility of the two countries in Africa justified "a mutual frankness."

He said: "The United Kingdom, as you know, has based its pattern of colonial development on the theory of partnership through political independence. "You have based yours on the theory of integration with the social and political system of the homeland."

"Neither of these theories has anything in common either with the dominating ambitions of Communism or with the sterile doctrine of apartheid."

"Both doctrines are based on respect for the human personality; both reject racialism."

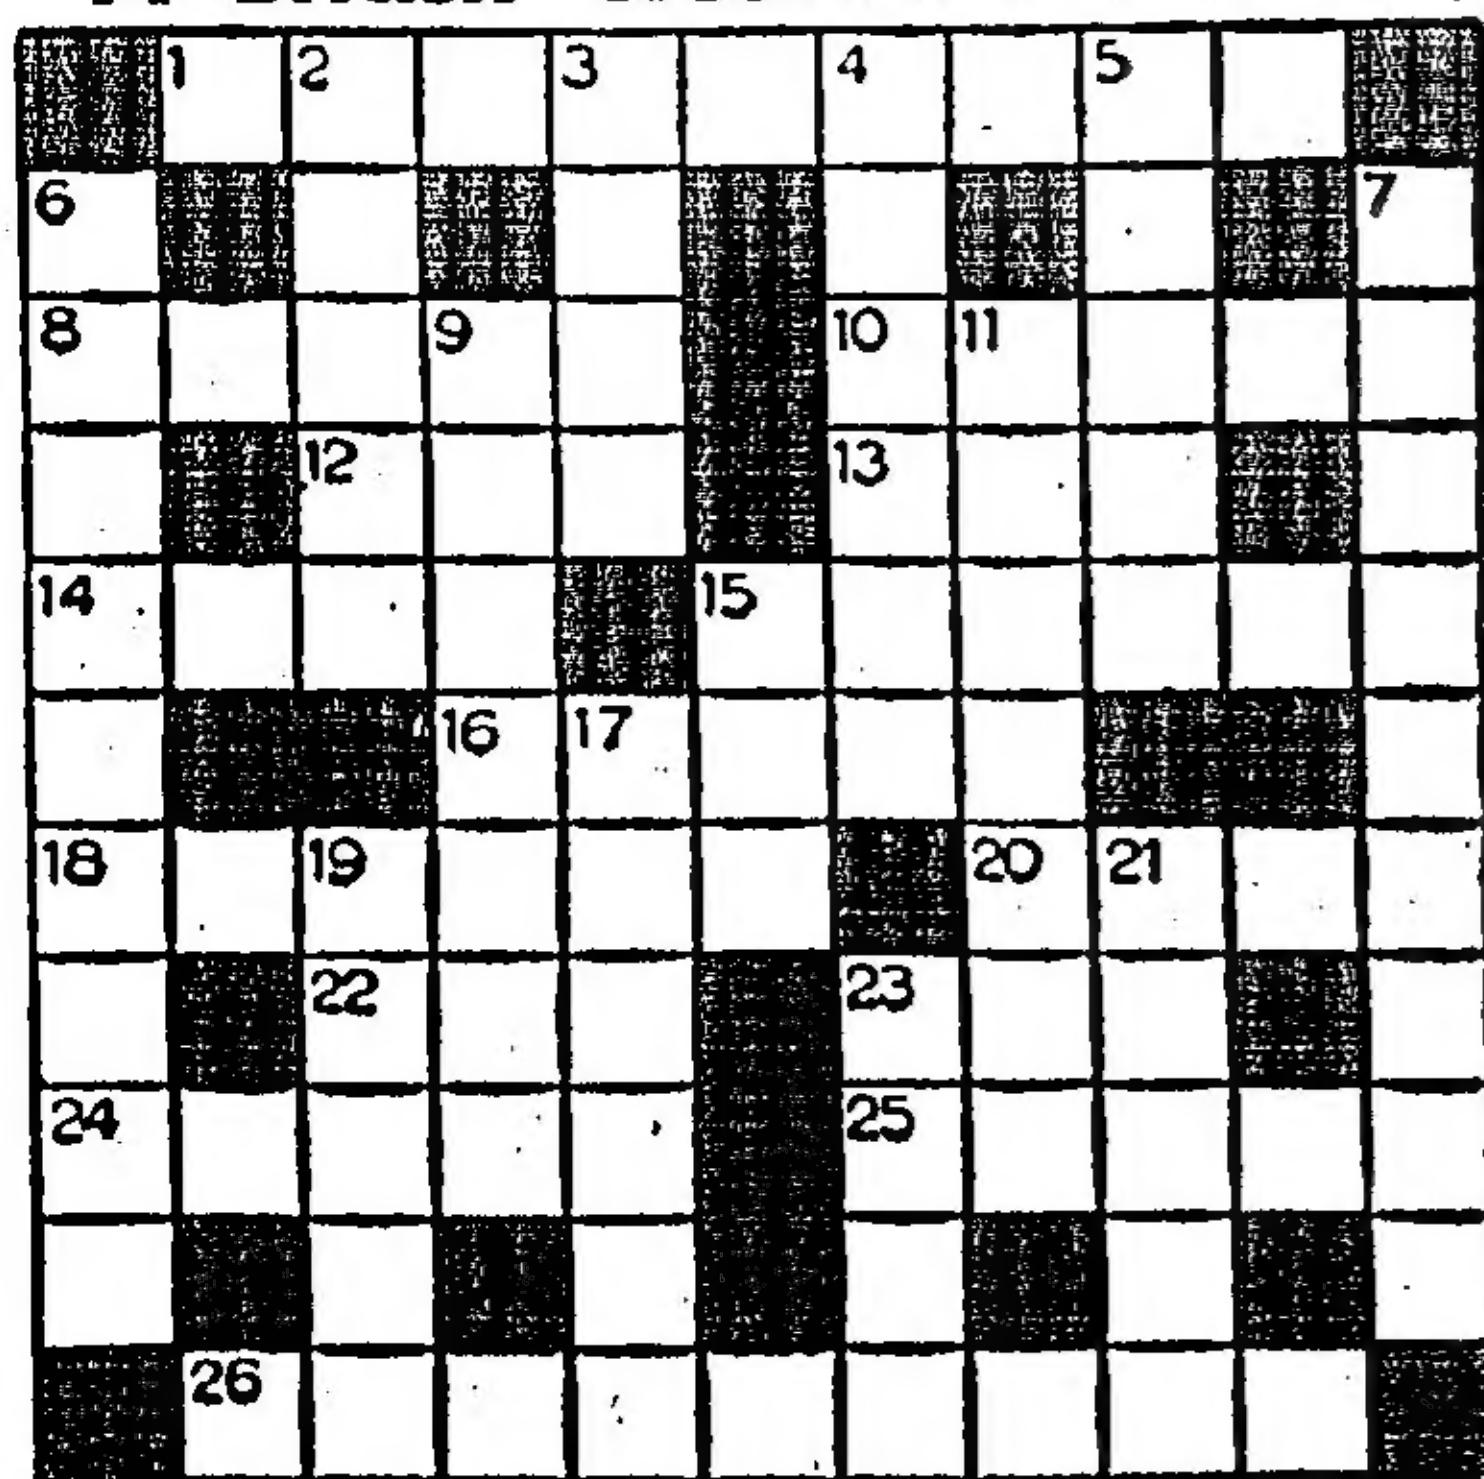

Lord Home continued: "Our own British experience in African matters is that it is necessary both to name a political goal and to be seen to be making progress toward it. "Once we are satisfied that an overseas territory is able to administer itself, we hand over more and more power to the local authorities."

Lord Home said he was not suggesting that the Commonwealth system was the only one.

"But," he said, "the essential ingredients remain the same, a programme of social and economic advance which is seen by the people to be a reality and a political goal which rallies people to carry responsibility and inspires them with all that is good in patriotism."—Reuters.

FEW HOURS BEFORE THE ANNOUNCEMENT

Princess Margaret presents prizes at school of nursing

London, May 25.

Princess Margaret was at the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital in London, presenting prizes at the hospital's school of nursing, a few hours before the announcement today that she was expecting a baby in the autumn.

The Princess told post-graduate nurses and those taking up ward sisters' duties: "Your increased knowledge will be especially useful to the rapidly developing countries of the Commonwealth with their expanding medical services."

Mr Armstrong-Jones spent the day in his office at the Design Centre-headquarters here of the Council of Industrial Design.

He left for home, however, before the news became known tonight.

The Princess will celebrate her 31st birthday on August 21, before the birth of her first child.

LARGER HOME

The couple are now living at No. 10 Kensington Palace, but it is planned that at the end of next year they will move into No. 1-A Kensington Palace, a much larger home.

A total of £70,000 is to be spent in repairs and adaptation of the new royal residence, given to the princess as a "grace and favour" home by Queen Elizabeth.

Princess Margaret's baby, whether it is a boy or a girl, will be fifth in line to the throne.

The order of succession after the baby is born will be:

1. Prince Charles, 12, the Queen's eldest son.
2. Prince Andrew, his brother, born on February 19 last year.
3. Princess Anne, 10, their sister.
4. Princess Margaret's baby.

QUESTION OF TITLE

Court circles pointed out tonight that, with a baby on the way, the question of a title for Princess Margaret's children becomes of pressing importance.

As things are now, the baby, although fifth in succession to the throne, would be plain Mr or Miss Armstrong-Jones.

The Queen could resolve the problem by a Royal edict proclaiming that her sister's children are to have the style and title of prince and princess, or any other title she considers suitable.

Another solution would be for the Queen to elevate Mr Armstrong-Jones to the Peerage — possibly with a Welsh title because of his Welsh ancestry.

An earldom is the lowest rank which would give all the children the title of "Lord" or "Lady."

If the Queen decided not to give Mr Armstrong-Jones a Peerage, she could still make Princess Margaret a Duchess or Marchioness in her own right, which would make all the Princess's children "Lords" or "Ladies." — China Mail Special.

building work

Cost of new building work in the Colony during April was $18,523,877.

Another $599,933 was spent on site formation work.

New buildings of all types erected totaled 76, including six factories and godowns, and 68 houses and flats.

ARTIST LEAVES

Miss Sun Yee, principal of Singapore Academy of Arts, left in the French liner Laos this morning.

Miss Sun is holding an exhibition of her paintings on board the liner at the ports of call of the liner's present voyage.

During her stay here, her works had attracted many Hongkong artists.

Traffic accidents

There were 584 traffic accidents in April—171 on Hongkong Island, 307 in Kowloon and 66 in the New Territories.

These accidents caused injury, five of them fatal, to 641 people, according to statistics published in today's Government Gazette.

Returns

Mr Michael Pal, Director of Cathay Limited, returned in the liner President Hoover this morning from a two-week business tour in Japan.

'No case,' defence submits

The driving test conspiracy case resumed before Mr K. R. Macfay at the Victoria District Court this morning, with Mr A. el Arculli submitting no case to answer for his client, the fifth accused.

The accused on trial are Tang Kam-hing, Fung King-wai, Chau Fat, Yuen Pui-hung, a woman, and Ip Lam-chuen.

They are alleged to have conspired to solicit money from candidates sitting for driving tests, with intent to corrupt authorized examiners.

The hearing continues. Accused are defended by Mr Leo d'Almeida, QC, Mr Patrick Yu, Mr C. K. F. Tung, Mr Henry Litton and Mr Arculli.

51,417 vehicles on roads

A total of 51,417 vehicles of all types were registered with the traffic branch of the Hongkong Police at the end of last month.

According to government statistics, the total includes 33,067 private cars, 3,023 motor cycles, 927 motor buses, 553 public rickshaws, 16 trailers and four sedan chairs.

There were 143 tram cars and 1,077 taxis in service. The number of licensed drivers of motor vehicles stood at 122,322—772 more than the total at the end of March this year.

A total of 2,000 provisional drivers were licensed and 4,255 driving tests authorised at the end of April.

700,000 travel on HK trains

Over 700,000 passengers travelled on trains in the British section of the Kowloon-Canton Railway in April.

Of this total, 357,360 made the upward journey to Shumchun and 350,544 the downward journey to Yau-mat and Tsim-shatsui.

A total of 2,896,740 kilograms of goods were carried on the upward services and 15,700,530 kilograms on the downward services during the month.

Revenue for the month totalled $840,486.67.

Moslems celebrate

The Moslem community this morning celebrated Id-ul-Uzha by holding prayers in their mosques in Hongkong and Kowloon.

More than 1,000 people attended the prayers. Mulvi Ahmed Cheung conducted the prayers in the Hongkong Mosque at Shelly-street.

Report on HK

In Mr Holden's painstaking letter to his friend, he has shown the validity of things shown in the TV film: "Report on HK": everything shown there—the refugee rat catcher, the interior of the resettlement flat, the crowded streets, etc.—are all reproduction of facts. And we cannot agree with him more that such are the faces of Hongkong just as we cannot agree more with the blind men who point out the faces that an elephant looks like a wall, a long round tube, etc.

But Mr Holden does not seem to be aware of the grave responsibilities a film, even more a TV film has in presenting a topic to millions of viewers.

Anything said is influential. He should have considered if he had shown his viewers the whole face of HK, and not just a section of HK. His object is not to throw out a few views on HK and settle for receiving "excellent" reviews in America.

He owes the American viewers and his viewers the whole face of HK, and not just a section of HK. He should have been fair in the Report, let him tell us or Mr George Ho again what he would have put in a Report on America, reported with the same attitude and aim that "Report on Hongkong" was reported.

583 vessels entered port during April

Five hundred and eighty-three ships, flying various flags, entered the port of Hongkong during April.

According to statistics published in the Government Gazette today, 250 of the ships entering port were of British registry while 244 ships flying the British flag were among the 570 vessels cleared in the same period.

A total of 508,995 deadweight tons of commercial cargo was discharged and 192,705 deadweight tons of cargo loaded last month.

Mr J. W. Sweetman to be Administrative Officer, Operations, Recruitment Department.
Mr M. D. A. Clinton ceased to act as Financial Secretary on the resumption of duty by Mr J. J. Cowperthwaite, the Government Gazette announced today.

The following have been appointed to the permanent and pensionable establishment:
Mr George Tong Tung-fat, Medical and Health Officer; Mr Lee Pak-fong, Structural Engineer; Mr J. H. Gould, Marine Officer; Mr G. B. Griffiths, Education Officer; Miss J. M. Mackenzie, Mistress; Miss T. Monaghan, Nursing Sister (Psychiatric); and Mr J. D. P. Tandy, Education Officer.

PWD foreman charged with demanding
A foreman of the Public Works Department appeared before Mr Derek Cons at Central Magistracy this morning on charges of demanding money with menaces.

The 32-year-old man, Lam Tak-yun, who was represented by Miss Helen Lo, pleaded not guilty. Hearing was fixed for June 14.

It is alleged that on three separate occasions between July, 1959 and January this year, Lam demanded with menaces, a total of $850 from three people in Aberdeen.

Detective Inspector Ma Kwong-yee, who is in charge of the case, said that there would be 10 witnesses for the prosecution.

Lam was allowed bail of $1,000.

MISSING WOMAN FOUND

Vancouver, May 26. An Australian woman anti-Communist speaker reported missing here by Ukrainian leaders who feared she had met foul play, turned up safe in Winnipeg today.

Mrs Christina Zarychy, 27, of Sydney, said she was unaware she was to have filled a speaking engagement at a women's league meeting here on Tuesday night.

A spokesman for the league said police located Mrs Zarychy in Winnipeg through a forwarding address on her trunk which had been left here for shipment.

Mrs Zarychy arrived here about the P. & O. Orient Lines ship Orinda. She was reported missing when friends waiting to greet her were unable to locate her.—AP.

Gaitskell's sunny springtime . . . after the dark days, the opposition comes back to life

SPRING has come to London at last. The parks are at their loveliest and even in the sunless corridors and lobbies of Westminster there is a tang in the air, for there this spring is peculiarly spectacular.

All the signs are that a new Opposition is blossoming forth. Socialist MPs have a lighter tread and even some of the most recalcitrant rebels are now greeting Chief Whip Herbert Bowden with a cheery "Good morning."

This is not to suggest that everything is yet "coming up roses and daffodils" for Mr Gaitskell, but at least the garden is much jollier than it was. At last it seems that the long, long quarrel over defence is about to end.

The National Executive met recently to approve the new home policy document produced by a committee presided over by Mr Harold Wilson. By early June this new Socialism for the sixties should be circulating in the constituencies. Assuming that Mr Gaitskell accepts this document as is confidently expected he will have moved never further before to the comfortable position defined by Earl Attlee as the ideal for the Labour Party Leader—slightly left of centre.

Examine the nationalisation issue upon which there was so much trouble after the last election.

A new formula of words has been devised which apparently satisfies everybody—in the words of one wag, "a blank cheque has been substituted for the shopping list."

A fright

There will be no attempt at a wholesale grab of a long list of industries—sugar, cement and insurance, for example. Once before this sort of thing not only scared industrialists, it frightened the wits out of the workers as well.

So now old phrases like "commanding heights" come back in new and more cunningly contrived clothes. Of course, steel and transport remain subject to overt attack, but for the rest there are such threats as State-owned factories competing against private firms. Which firms? Wait and see.

As they have looked over the electoral scene the Labour Party experts have realised that the biggest problem facing young married people in the big urban areas is still that of getting a house at a reasonable price. Hence they plan to give local authorities powers to take over land development and make house building cheaper.

This is argued to be a sure-fire vote winner, particularly in 60 or so dormitory constituencies, the capture of which would see a Labour Government returned.

The schools

Again, the public schools are now definitely for the chopping block.

They are gradually to be merged with the state school system and with their disappearance will vanish also those special scholarships which assure certain schools of so many places at the older universities.

Now all these ideas are bubbling merrily away at a time when the Tory Government is having a particularly rough passage.

The inept handling of the Wedgwood Benn case, the still more unfortunate approach to the Blake affair, the developments in Africa and fantastic wanderings in the labyrinth of the Common Market have all lowered the Government's stock.

On these issues the Tories themselves are far from united—but they are issues upon which the Labour Party is virtually unanimous.

Therefore the situation is arising in which we shall at last have something approaching an effective Opposition—which is the first step towards persuading the country that there is in being an alternative Government.

This seemed impossible only a matter of weeks ago. Now the transformation is there for all to see, just as vivid and in its way exciting as the transformation in the parks.

It is still true that there are some 60 to 70 Labour MPs who will never willingly accept Mr Gaitskell as leader.

But, of course, Mr Gaitskell now appears to be winning and there are many who do not wish to leave it until too late before jumping aboard his pantechelon.

Defence issue

How has this situation come about? I would say that the change started when Mr Richard Crossman, as party chairman, insisted that all three rival defence policies submitted to the National Executive should be published.

At once a new situation emerged. The full-blown unilateralists, the supporters of the official line and the compromisers were neatly sorted out.

Immediately it was clear that the unilateralists were a tiny minority and that an agreed defence policy was possible.

As far as the electorate is concerned it is becoming clear that the Labour Party is not going pacifist or neutralist and that it is as willing as the Tories to defend Britain.

And it must be remembered that this, after all, was what Mr Gaitskell said he was going to "fight, fight and fight again" to achieve.

He has done it—thanks in part to Mr Crossman. An odd irony indeed.

Can this new upsurge in the party be maintained? Or will the strong personal animosities that still remain find expression in some new internal explosion? On current form the outlook for Labour is brighter by far than it has been for a long time.

But current form is not the only consideration in judging politicians. The past record speaks for itself. For too often the party has been split allegedly over issues of policy but in fact over clashes of personality.

However, for the moment the black clouds are behind them; Labour's MPs are enjoying the spring sunshine while they may and dreaming once again of the fruits of office. (London Express Service).

NOW THAT THE PIGMIES HAVE TOPPLED THE GIANT . . .

Leopoldville. MIGHTY Moise Tshombe, President of Katanga, son of kings, didn't just walk into a trap. He strutted in. And now, defeated, cast down, scorned, he sits under a guard of Congolese troops, waiting for whatever fate his masters may choose for him.

How different was his arrival at the conference of Congolese leaders in Coquilhatville; the talks that became a trap. The haughty black moon of his face glistened. His chest swelled under expensive silk. He tossed cigarettes to the Coquilhatville crowd like a Nell Gwynn distributing oranges.

He was stronger than Kasavubu, stronger than Lumumba, stronger than UNO. Until the pack pulled him down.

Why did Tshombe walk into the trap? Why, in a jungle world where politics and banditry mean the same thing, did he go unprotected to parley in his enemies' territory?

Pride. That is the only answer. He, Moise Tshombe, President of Katanga, leader of men, thought he was too big to fear the attacks of former clerks and schoolteachers; political pigmies.

Modern

Was he not a member of the Lunda royal family? Had he not fathered 10 children by a daughter of his paramount chief?

dandy, the cynical talk of a sophisticate. No business man, he went bankrupt. But, ready to flatter his esteem, Belgian friends came to set him on his feet again. Finally, last July, came the touch which made Tshombe a god in his own eyes. At the age of 42 he found himself supreme ruler of a fabulously wealthy independent State, Katanga, courted and supported by the white men who had once been so powerful. While the rest of the Congo writhed under anarchy, unemployment and economic collapse, Katanga prospered. Tshombe had planes and a white-officered army of 5,000 who could easily repel the attacks which flizzed in the impenetrable jungle of his frontiers.

Everything about Tshombe's career was calculated to make him think himself a superior being. In a primitive world he could consider himself a modern man; in a world of poverty, a rich one.

His father owned a chain of stores and a European hotel—by African standards the family were millionaires.

He had a good secondary education at an American mission school. He inherited a large estate. He was an "evolvee," meaning that the Belgian masters of his country treated him as an equal. So Moise grew up. Hugely built, handsome, he sported foppish clothes, the air of a More flattering still, his northern neighbour, Kasavubu, soon came to him for help. Patrice Lumumba was bedeviling the life of Leopoldville, could Tshombe look after him in safe custody? With a magnanimous gesture, the Katanga leader agreed to take care of Lumumba. For good.

In March Tshombe went to the Madagascar round-table meeting of Congo leaders. He found he could twist the conference whichever way he wanted.

His proposals for federation were eagerly accepted by the other chiefs. There could be no doubt about it, he, Tshombe, was the giant of the Congo.

So why not accept the invitation to talks in Coquilhatville? Why not show again his supreme grasp, his intelligence, his leadership? Who would dare stand against him?

There was another point, Katanga's boom had started to slacken and there were rumours from other African powers about Tshombe's high-handed actions.

It might do no harm to maintain a semblance of co-operation with the rest of the Congo.

So Moise Tshombe went to Coquilhatville. And now he sits under paratroop guard in a villa there, a broken, frightened man, tasting the bitterness of defeat.

Whether he will live or die is in the balance; only the power and initiative he once showed gives the faintest gleam of hope.

A world of atoms down Streatham High Road

ON any morning in the week, hundreds of shoppers on Streatham High Road pass a small door alongside a raincoat shop.

Up some narrow stairs is a world of atomic power stations, chemical plants, oil refineries and all the mysteries of modern engineering.

It is the world of Michael Houghton and Jack Farnfield, both 32, and a firm of design specialists they have created. They are not Streatham boys, Houghton was born in Rochester, Kent, Farnfield in Battersea.

Both studied engineering at night school. "I went to the Wandsworth Technical College," Farnfield says proudly.

Detailed

Four years ago they threw up good jobs as mechanical and electrical engineers to set up on their own.

Their idea was to start a business that would do detailed design work for lending consultants and contractors.

By ALEXANDER THOMSON

Now they employ 360 engineers and draughtsmen and have offices in Cardiff and Birmingham, as well as Streatham.

They have a payroll of £7,000 a week, but the fees they are earning are now running at the rate of £750,000 a year.

Jobs on hand include design work for the reactor core of a £60 million nuclear power station at Trawsfynydd, North Wales.

"We have had 20 men on it for the past 12 months," said Michael Houghton as he showed me round one of the firm's drawing offices on three floors over a local cleaners.

For Russia

Other projects are helping to design a chemical factory for Russia, and preparing drawings for an extension to another plant in Scotland owned by Distillers and British Petroleum.

Michael Houghton and Jack Farnfield started their firm, called Develco Ltd, with £50 each in March 1957.

Their first office was "the front room" in Jack's house in Moyser-road, Streatham.

Michael's wife, Sheila, worked as secretary. Jack's wife, Dorcen, did the books and looked after the telephone.

At first the going was tough. "That Christmas," Michael Houghton recalled, "we could not afford turkey. We had roast beef, instead."

By early 1958 they were employing 20 draughtsmen. The big break through came that winter. Expansion has been swift ever since.

"But until six months ago," said Jack Farnfield, "we paid ourselves only £13 a week, much less than we were earning in our old jobs."

The list of companies for which their firm has already done design work, either directly or indirectly, is impressive.

On it are such big names as ICI, British Nylon Spinners, British Oxygen, Burmah Oil, Foster Wheeler and Decca.

What do these two bright young men say about their success?

Michael: "People these days don't always try hard enough for what they want. Enthusiasm is worth a lot in any business."

Jack: "If you know where you are going, what's wrong with working 24 hours a day to get there?"

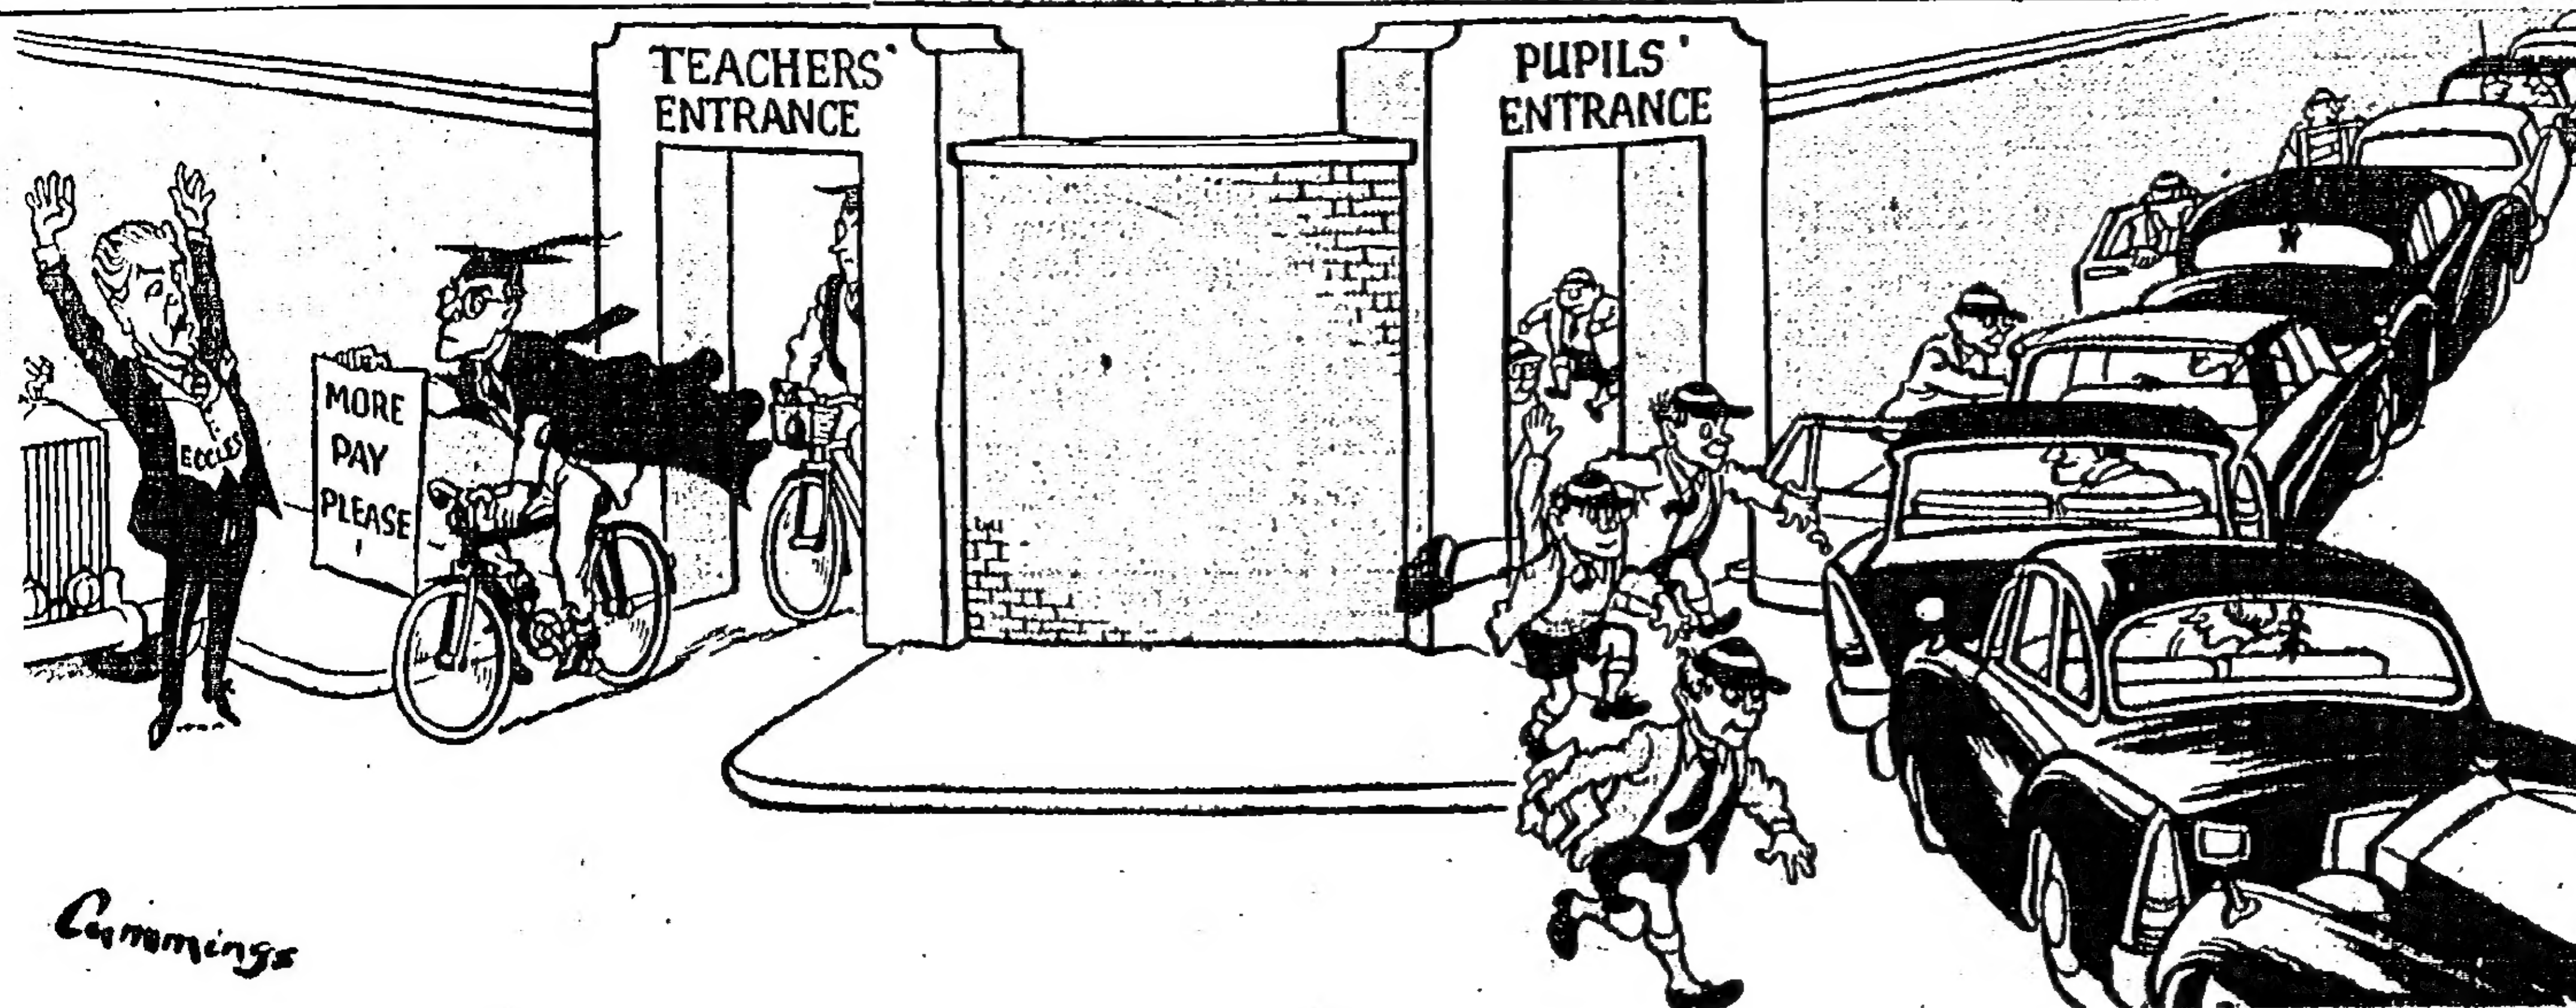

Michael: "Our only ambition is to build up the largest and finest design organisation in the world."

These two friends are now having their offices redecorated. They have also bought themselves a couple of Jaguars.

"We don't like spending money on luxuries," Houghton explained. "But we've decided it's time to put on a bit of a front."

"We were taught a lesson when an important client fell over a hole in our old carpet. We haven't seen him since."

(London Express Service).

BENAUD STRIKES FORM

Scores 53 not out and takes one wicket for 41 against Gloucester

Bristol, May 25.

Gloucestershire have been set 279 in five hours 20 minutes to beat the Australians here tomorrow. Richie Benaud, the Australian captain, declared his team's second innings closed at 154 for three after play ended.

Earlier, Gloucestershire had been dismissed for a disappointing 167 in reply to the touring team's first innings of 291 for nine declared.

With the first Test only a fortnight away, a heartening feature for the Australians was the form of skipper Richie Benaud.

He gave his injured shoulder a thorough testing with 10 overs in the country's innings, taking one for 41, and then found his best batting form for the first time this season.

Both batsmen drove stylishly and Alan Davidson in particular suffered from their powerful hitting. Young had seven fours in his bright 41 and Nicholls had nine fours in a fine 58, made in an hour and 56 minutes.

Collapsos

After these two left, however, the county collapsed, losing their last five wickets for 25 runs.

Lindsay Kline, bowling his left-arm spinners accurately, gave glimpses of his best Australian form for the first time on the tour and fully deserved his three for 27, while Frank Milton had plenty of pace off the pitch to earn figures of three for 25.

Bobby Simpson and Colin McDonald, the Australian openers, added 54 in easy style before tea, but McDonald was thrown out by Arthur Milton from ailly mid-on immediately afterwards.

Simpson helped Benaud to add 52 for the second wicket at one minute before falling to Dave Allen's off-spin.

Norman O'Neill began confidently before giving Allen a catch off Dave Smith at cover-point and then Peter Burge stayed with Benaud until the end.

Archie Moore begins training

New York, May 25. Archie Moore resumed his training routine today by boxing for the first time in his Eastern Camp, a three-round workout with Greatest Crawford of New York.

Moore has been training in San Diego, California, and making exhibition appearances to prepare for the June 10 defence of his share of the world light heavyweight title against Italy's Giulio Rinaldi.

Moore said he weighed "just about 180 pounds" or five over the 175-pound class limit.

"I am very satisfied," he said, "everything is going just right."

He plans to box every day, including Sunday, until time to break camp for the fight at Madison Square Garden—AP.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES IN TUESDAY'S NEAR-RIOT INADEQUATE? dear sir

Your editorial yesterday was as stupidly fallacious as it was ill-conceived. You have begged the real issue by clouding it with trite platitudes; and your ending suggestion — to deprive our Colony Amateur players the opportunity to rank with acknowledged world flight professionals — is as wicked as it is infamous.

We are honoured that this Colony can produce such calibre of players and we all look forward to the day when a Hongkong team will be able enough to be entered for the World Association Football Cup.

What our players lack, and it would appear that this is the one thing that you do not wish them to have, is the kind of opposition which the noble FA side provided, namely first class match experience.

However, this is not the main issue at stake; although I perceive had to make mention of it in order to straighten out your confused thinking.

You hinted that the trials may have had a hand in the disturbances which occurred after the match. It is well known throughout the world that a soccer mob — or indeed a mob of any character — is a potential danger; and in such a situation, the word "sportsmanship" is mythical. Presumably the authorities had equal, if not better chances of positioning their agents around the ground as the experience of the previous riot, was this in point of fact done?

Your paper estimated a crowd of 25,000, which to my reckoning was conservative. How many policemen were on duty in the immediate vicinity of the ground during, and immediately after the match? I myself did not see a single policeman between the west side gates to the bottom of Caroline Hill on leaving the ground; and when I saw them, they happened to be traffic policemen. And the street illumination, for the exodus of such a large crowd, was appalling.

Under these conditions, trials or no trials, everything was conducive for an angry mob to resort to violence.

The love of Association Football in this Colony — which has precious little to offer as mass entertainment for its populace — is a healthy trend. Please do things to nurture and encourage it; and for a start you may wish to initiate an enquiry along realistic lines into the full facts of what really happened last Tuesday, including the Charge of the Baton-Happy Brigade down Festival Street which occurred a good three quarters of an hour after the game had been played.

DERBY CALLOVER

Pinturischio back in the betting

London, May 25.

The former ante-post favourite, Pinturischio, who was not quoted at the last callover following his stomach trouble, re-entered the betting list at 20 to 1 at tonight's Victoria Club callover on the Epsom Derby.

This was merely a "talking no chances" move on the part of the bookmakers for there were no backers for the colt.

There was, in fact, little business and the only bet of note was for the French challenger Moutiers, backed to win £2,000. Moutiers remained firm favourite at 7 to 1.

Second favourites

Just Great, Pardao and Sovereign remained joint second favourites at 10 to 1. The Irish main hope Time Greine drifted one point to join Dual on the 12 to 1 mark.

Belliqueux is still France's second best at 10 to 1, having his odds shortened by four points. But previously unquoted French colt, Diela Drake was on the 20 to 1 spot with Pinturischio and Neanderthal.

DEFENDING

The team, Tass said, has been practising for months to defend the world title. It has won in three straight championship contests.

Tass said Soviet experts believe Turkey, Rumania and Bulgaria will provide the toughest competition at team level. In separate weight divisions strong contenders are expected from Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, East Germany and Japan, Tass said—AP.

Strong challenge by South Africans in the Penfold

Southampton, May 25. With Harold Henning at 135, the South African challenge for the top 2,055 prize in the Penfold golf competition today becomes more intensified.

Eric Brown (Buchanan Castle) and his fellow-Scot Tom Halliburton (Wentworth) both joined Henning in the 135 mark, but today they changed roles. Brown was happy with a fine 67 but Halliburton, who broke the Municipal course record with a first-round 64 cracked up after three-putting for a dreadful six at the 18th and finished the round with a disappointing 71.

'SLOW GOING'

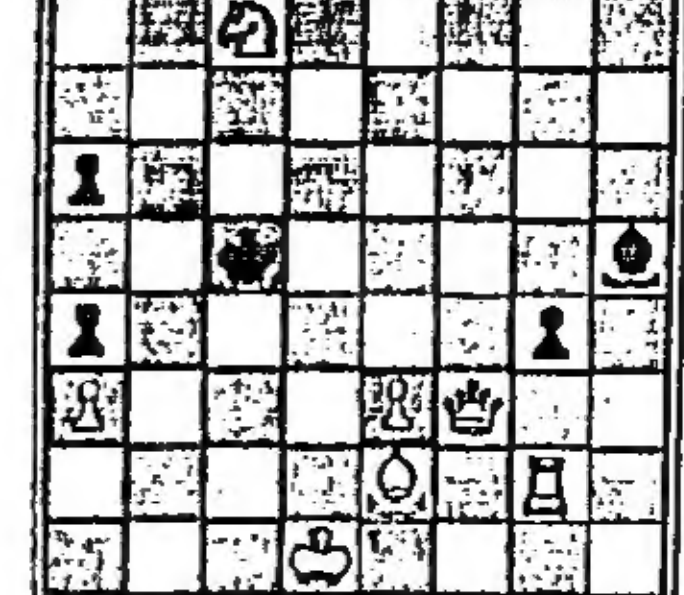

There was some excuse, however for the weary 45-year-old Halliburton. He had to wait for every stroke in the boiling sunshine in a round which dragged on for three hours 20 minutes, and said: "This terrible slow going not only makes one tired but takes away one's concentration."

South Africa's David Hutchinson had a magnificent round to put himself among the leaders with a total of 134.

He had a 65 round the afternoon and notched up admiring applause for his putting. He got birdies with his putt of 20 feet or more at the sixth and 15 feet on the seventh 16th and 18th greens. Other South Africa scores include B.B. Wilkes and R. Wallman with scores respectively of 141 and 142—APF.

Century knocks by two England Test probables

London, May 25.

With the first Test match against Australia less than a fortnight away, two of England's likely players hit their first centuries of the summer today.

Jim Parks, who is expected to be England's wicket-keeper, hammered a glorious 168 not out for Sussex against Somerset at Eastbourne, including two sixes and 21 fours in a four-hour stay.

Then opener Geoff Pullar followed a lean spell by making 125 for Lancashire against Northamptonshire at Old Trafford. Pullar batted just under five hours, with 15 boundaries, and though uncertain early on, revealed some of his best form towards the end of his stay.

Top scorer

Top scorer of the day was Norman Hill, who hit 162 for Nottinghamshire against Oxford University at Oxford. Hill, like Pullar, batted just under five hours with 28 fours to his credit.

Freddie Trueman, the England and Yorkshire fast bowler, worked up to top pace at Leeds and his analysis of four for 47 against Hampshire included the 1,000th wicket of his career for Yorkshire.

Yorkshire, the reigning champions and current leaders, are well placed for another win, as they start the last day with a lead of 139 and eight wickets in hand.

Innings win

Two County matches were completed in two days, Leicestershire beating Glamorgan by one wicket at Leicester, and Worcestershire beating Derbyshire by an innings and 15 runs at Derby.

Leicestershire, needing 107 to win, lost wickets steadily to paceman Ossie Wheatley, whose six for 47 gave him a match analysis of 13 for 115. The last two men came together with six still needed.

Derbyshire's second innings slump saw them lose their last seven batsmen for only 11 runs to spinners Norman Gifford (five for 17) and Martin Norton (three for three).

Closing scores

At the Oval: Surrey 352 for six declared and 39 for no wicket. Warwickshire 228 (A. Smith 82, T. Cartwright 97 not out, D. Gibson seven for 38).

At Oxford: Oxford University 285 and 138 for two (D. Pittley 71 not out). Nottinghamshire 355 for seven declared (N. Hill 102, N. Winfield 40, C. Poole 40).

At Leeds: Yorkshire 279 and 43 for two. Hampshire 104 (D. Baldry 84 not out).

At Bristol: Australians 201 and 154 for three (R. Simpson 45, R. Benaud 53 not out, D. Gifford 107, D. Young 41, R. Nicholls 58).

At Old Trafford: Northamptonshire 209 and 11 for no wicket. Lancashire 388 for nine declared (G. Pullar 125, K. Grieves 88, J. Bond 49).

Malayan footballers win in Japan

Tokyo, May 25.

Malaya today drew two-all in a soccer match with the Yawata Iron and Steel Company's team at Ohtani Stadium in Kashiwa, Southern Japan.

All goals were scored in the second half.

The Malaysians staged a last minute comeback after trailing 0-2.

It was their first victory in the three-match tour of Japan.

Their last 0-4 against Uruguay was Dehko in their opening match earlier this week.

Their next match will be on May 28 against All-Japan in Tokyo.—Reuter.

BADMINTON

Denmark beat Malaya

Singapore, May 25. Denmark's Thomas Cuppers, claiming to have "fully acclimatised" themselves to tropical heat, finished off their Singapore engagement with a seven to two victory over Malaya at the Badminton Stadium here today.

In the first day of the tie yesterday, the Danes had won all the four matches.

With 5,000 home fans watching, Malaya made the Danes fight all the three, taking two out of the night's five matches. Danish stars Finn Kobbero and Brian Kops said after the match that they are now more confident than ever of winning the Thomas Cup from Indonesia.

"We do not have any worry about beat any more", they confided.

Kops and Kobbero were forced into rubber sets tonight before they subdued their young Malayan opponents. Kops beat Malaysia's Hui Ng, 14-18, 15-1, 15-4 and Kobbero took a longer time to beat the erratic Tan Yee-khan by 15-4, 15-15, 15-12.

Denmark's No. 3 singles Henning Borch, who gave Thailand's Charoen Wattanasin a fright before going down in the All-England Championships, failed to make an impression against the hard-hitting B. Boon-see of Malaya, losing by 15-13, 15-12.

In the sensation of the evening Malaya's pair of veteran Ong Poh-hin and George Yip mastered Kops and P. E. Neilson 2-0, 15-0. In the final doubles Ng Boon-see and Tan Yee-khan were no match for the Danes' All-England champions who won 15-10, 15-0.—APF.

Johansson: I think I can lick Liston

Geneva, May 25. Ingemar Johansson, the ex-world heavyweight champion, announced today he will fight Sonny Liston in the United States or elsewhere before the end of this year.

The Swede said in a formal statement after talking with William Denis Fugazy that Fugazy Sports will arrange for the fight and choose the date and site.

Johansson said he will fight Liston "some time before December 31, 1961, and most probably in September."

Johansson said his company, Scanar, would prefer the bout to take place in the United States "if my tax situation is disposed of."

"If not," he added, "it prefers (the fight) to take place possibly in Canada or Nassau." Johansson told reporters: "I don't think he is unbeatable. I think I can lick him. It would be fun to beat him after these big words from him." Johansson added with a smile.

Pietrangeli, Santana in French tennis final

Paris, May 26.

Nicola Pietrangeli, the Italian star, and holder of the title for the past two years, and Manuel Santana of Spain, seeded No. 6, today reached the final of the men's singles in the French Tennis Championships here.

Pietrangeli gained a convincing 6-1, 6-4, 6-3 win over Sweden's Jan-Erik Lundquist in the semi-finals, while Santana, with craft and guile, broke up the power game of Australian Rod Laver to win 3-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-0.

Britain's Ann Haydon and Yola Ramirez of Mexico are the finalists in the women's singles.

In today's semi-finals Miss Haydon beat Hungary's Suzi Kormoczy 3-6, 6-1, 6-3, while Miss Ramirez overcame Edda Huding of West Germany 6-4, 1-6, 6-3. Miss Ramirez lost to American Darlene Hard in last year's final.—Reuter.

Palmer, Player to compete in Australia

Sydney, May 25. Leading American golfer Arnold Palmer will compete in the Wills £A3,000, 72-hole classic in Sydney in October.

Mr W. S. Bengtsson, a director of W. D. and H. O. Wills announced in Sydney today.

This year's winner of the American Masters Tournament, Garry Player (South Africa), Stan Leonard (Canada) and Australians Peter Thomson and Kel Nagle would play against Palmer, he said.

The New South Wales section of the Professional Golfers' Association would control the tournament—the richest in Australia. The tournament will comprise 18 holes on the first two days, October 26 and 27, and 36 holes on the final day, October 28.—China Mail Special.

'Just out of grudge'

Sydney, May 25. The decision of the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia to vote for a ban on open tennis tournaments resulted "simply from a personal grudge against Jack Kraemer," Australian Ashley Cooper said in Sydney today.

Cooper, who turned professional two years ago, arrived by plane after a South African tour.

He told reporters at Kingsford Smith Airport that open tennis was still a much discussed topic amongst professional players.

"After all they believe they are best in the world and would like the opportunity to prove it," he said.—China Mail Special.

HARRY CARPENTER talks to His (new) Cricket Highness from

No, the Noob hasn't even got his own bat

Only in England would you be privileged to see an Indian prince going in to bat with an L sign on his back. This happened in a charity cricket match of Abingdon. The learner? The 20-year-old Mansur Ali Khan, Nawab of Pataudi. His Oxford undergrad chums know him as the Noob.

Slight and dusky, with wrists of steel, the Noob is no L-driver with a bat. He may become one of the game's great run-getters. Centuries stream from his bat—three in his last three innings.

You might expect royalty to own a bat. Not the Noob. He shares one with India's Test star, Abbas Ali Baig, in the Oxford team.

"I just don't have one of my own at the moment," said the nawab off-handedly.

Nor does his highness own a car. But he's about to go into joint-ownership with an undergraduate friend.

"He's in London buying it now. We're going for a second-hand Jaguar XK, or a new Morris 1000. The price is roughly the same you know."

Half a century ago, schoolboy-fiction writer Frank Richards invented a Greyfriars character, Hurree Jamsai Ram Singh, an Indian prince who was whizzo at cricket.

The 5ft. 7in. nawab—and his father before him—have turned romantic legend into more fascinating fact.

His famous father, the Nawab, died on January 5, 1952, at the age of 41. He had a heart attack minutes after playing polo. It was his son's 11th birthday.

The father, who played in Tests for England and India before and after the last war, once hit four successive hundreds for Oxford.

Ruler

In 1947 Indian royalty was deprived of power and land but for that the Noob at Oxford would today be hereditary ruler of some 20,000 Moslems in the Punjab State of Pataudi—about the size of Rutland, England's smallest county.

His mother is the daughter of the Nawab of Bhopal, who once ruled 750,000 subjects in one of India's richest States. She and her three daughters now live in New Delhi.

"We used to live in a palace. I suppose you'd call it that," said the nawab.

"Now my mother and sisters live in a house, not particularly big."

"I do some big-game hunting, play some cricket... the time flies... and I'm back in England."

He continued wistfully: "I wish I could remember my father better. He taught me to play, but I only recall batting with him once in a game. I was about ten."

"No, I'm not consciously trying to be like him, although our careers seem to be running parallel. He was at the same Oxford college—Balliol—as me."

Since his father died, the nawab has lived most of his life in England; first at a Hemel Hempstead prep school, then at Winchester College, now at Oxford, where he is reading Arabic and French.

Guardians

"I may enter the Indian foreign service when I leave here. He frequently stays with them on their farm at Wisborough Green, Sussex. This qualifies him to play for Sussex."

An English family, the Macdonalds, act as his guardians here. He frequently stays with them on their farm at Wisborough Green, Sussex. This qualifies him to play for Sussex.

He laughed off my suggestion that he might be termed wealthy. "Compared with some Indian royalty, I'm only a poor man," he said. "No, nothing like a millionaire."

He inherited jewels, a few works of art and an amount of money, which has been invested to bring in an income. He and his family also receive a grant from India's privy purse.

In Oxford the Noob is strictly one of the lads. He has three firm friends; all cricket Blues: David Green, Alan Smith, and Abbas Ali Baig. Together, they see films, drink beer in the pubs and date girlfriends. For off-duty reading, the nawab likes Hammonds' Lines and the novels of John Galsworthy (Howland Junction) Masters.

Green, a Mancunian who speaks broad Lancashire, is credited with inventing the term "Noob." The title should be pronounced "Noo-wah." It's the same as maharajah," said the prince, "only in a different religion."

The Noob has a prominent nose, heavy eyebrows and darkly lustrous brown eyes. It is a classical Indian face.

But Green once good-naturedly pulled his leg with the crack: "By God, Noob, you're an ugly so-and-so."

For some time after this, the nawab was known as the Vulch (short for vulture) or Draceurs (Undergrad for Dracula).

"Or sometimes we just call him Syd," said another member of the team.

His tutors address him by his first name, Mansur, the Press refer to him as the Tiger ("I seem to have been called that at home since birth").

Fame

On the field he is the smallest in the team, moves quickly and catlike, wears two sweaters, and, handles his team—he was made captain this year—with quiet confidence.

Not averse to brightening cricket, he has been known, when the other side is determined to dig in and be dull, to scrape his hand black with down over both ears in order to disturb a batsman's concentration.

Never mind those three successive 100's. I found out that his fame at Oxford currently rests on a greater feat.

In that rollicking Abingdon match he smote two successive sixes. Then he turned to a fielder.

"Pick out a car on the boundary," he said. The fielder did so.

Next swipe the ball landed plumb on the roof of the selected car.

The owner, delighted at having been thus honoured, asked the Noob to autograph the dent.

WORLD OF SPORT

SPRINT BARRIER

By JOHN COTTRELL

With the retirement of Germany's Olympic 100 metres champion Armin Hary, the new "wonder boy" of world sprinting is tearaway Dennis Johnson, the Jamaican student who has now equalled the world 100 yards record of 9.3 secs four times in two months.

Like Hary, young Johnson has been turning in such consistently fast times that doubts about his startling technique have been raised by the Americans, who were accustomed to dominating the sprints before the Rome Olympics.

Observers have claimed that he rises so slowly from his marks into the "set" position that other runners feel undue strain while waiting for him in the tensed-up finger-tips-and-toes position.

9.2 seconds?

But Bud Winter, Johnson's coach at San Jose State College, claims that the sole purpose of this slow movement is to maintain his runner's relaxation, not upset the rivals.

Meanwhile, interest focuses on the possibility of Johnson at last breaking through the 9.3 barrier which has now been reached, and never officially passed, by eleven world champions and on 18 occasions.

Consistency makes Johnson the favourite to achieve 9.2 sec. But one man could beat him to that elusive target—American Frank Budd, who was fifth in the Olympic final.

This month, at Villanova, Pennsylvania, Budd also did 9.3, and but for the presence of a fourth timekeeper he would have made it 9.2 sec. The official watches recorded 9.2, 9.2, 9.3, and 9.4.

Temptation

Recently I praised Carmen Basilio, the onion-picker who became a world champion, for his wisdom in retiring from the ring. Alas, there is now danger of his being tempted back to take more punishment.

I hear that boxing manager Al Wise has offered Basilio $21,000 to make a comeback bid against 23-year-old John Smith, Californian State middleweight champion.

It may seem like easy money for the tough little guy who defied Sugar Ray Robinson in his prime. But my advice is: Don't be tempted out of your crease, Basilio, or surely you will end up being stumped.

It was a gala charity fashion parade organised by the Australian Trade Mission in Hongkong in aid of funds for the Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

Stars of the show were the Four Top Australian Models of 1961, and their chaperone and emcee, June Dally-Watkins.

Big hit of the show was the all-Australian wardrobe which consisted of 84 garments, ranging from swimsuits, to Australian wool fashions, to grand evening gowns.

And it all went to show that in the world of fashion and wines, Australia has not been left behind.

All the clothes are available to buyers in Hongkong, and they are all the type of clothes that will fit into any woman's wardrobe—extremely wearable, fresh and pretty.

THE COST

The total cost of the wardrobe is over £3,500 and it has been provided by Anthony Hordern of Sydney, although designed by fashion houses in Melbourne and Sydney.

The evening began with an all-Australian dinner—Kangaroo-tail soup, Sydney fish, duckling named after the Hawkesbury River in New South Wales, peas named after Melbourne's Yarra River.

Which was created more than 50 years ago in honour of the great Australian soprano, Dame Nellie Melba.

(On the same day in London, music lovers paid tribute to the Covent Garden on the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dame Nellie Melba, calling her "the greatest Australian prima donna to make her mark in Europe.")

Each course was accompanied by the appropriate wines.

Around the walls were big natural-like black and white photographs of Australia and Australian life. At the back of the stage was a huge mural of Sydney Harbour and the Sydney Harbour Bridge.

FREE TRIP

Also on stage were fresh green gum tips, young branches taken from the tall Australian gum or eucalyptus trees. They were brought to Hongkong along with the food and wine by Cathay Pacific Airways.

The airline has also provided a free round trip for the fashion team.

The parade itself was an enormous success with the audience warmly applauding each ensemble.

The four models, former industrial chemistry student Patricia Duffie, Sunday school teacher Lorraine Knight, champion equestrian Judy Lindsay and Australian-born Italian Luce Carmagnola showed the clothes with style and ease.

A commentary spiced with glimpses of Australian life—"the sort of hat you can see on the beach at Bondi... Just the suit for the luxury resort of Surfer's Paradise... Just the thing to wear for a luncheon in Sydney"—was given by June Dally-Watkins, known as Australia's Top Model.

THE GUESTS

Present at the function was the Australian Trade Commissioner, Mr. George B. Patterson and Mrs. Patterson, Sir Silkin Chiu, Chairman of the Hongkong Anti-Tuberculosis Association, Air Commodore and Mrs. P. L. Donkin, the Portuguese Consul, Dr. Joao De Oliveira Pequito and the Australian Trade Officer, Mr. W. Ludwig and Mrs. Ludwig.

Tomorrow, the fashion team is going to Macao to give a parade there at the invitation of the Macao Government.

Hongkong will have another opportunity to see the clothes and the models this afternoon when they give another parade in the Miramar Hotel at 5.30 pm.

Hawker Force men told to be honest

Mr Brook Bernacchi took the salute at a march past of men of the Hawker Control Force at a passing out parade this morning.

Thirty-eight recruit constables paraded before Mr Bernacchi, music being provided by the Band of the Hongkong Police Force.

The best recruit of the No. 3 course, Constable No. 94, Lui Yiu-chiu, and the best recruit of No. 4 course, Constable No. 111 Chan Yiu-wah, received silver whistles.

Mr Bernacchi spoke to the men as Chairman of the Hawkers' Select Committee of the Urban Council.

OF THE PUBLIC

He asked the men to co-operate with the Urban Council in the endeavour to make Hongkong into a better place. He told them they should always remember that hawkers were members of the public, as well as other people, and that they should control their tempers and establish a reputation for honesty and uprightness second to none.

"Even if you make mistakes at first, you will ultimately be accepted, liked and looked up to by public and hawkers alike, provided you are known to be incorruptible, and provided you are known to give the same fair treatment to all."

With Mr Brook Bernacchi on his inspection were Mr L. Power, Inspector of Police, the parade commander; Mr A. J. Sheppard, Assistant Director of Urban Services, and Mr C. L. Scobell, Commandant, Hawker Control Force.

Staff Sergeant Chan Tze-dun was also a parade commander, and squad commanders were Sergeant Chan Kai-wah and Acting Corporal Yu Kwong-fai. Staff Sergeant Puh Wai-hing conducted the Police Band, Li Hong being the Drum Major.

Former Hongkong manager of APL

Mr A. A. Chase, former manager of the American President Lines here, arrived with his wife in the liner President Hoover this morning from Japan en route to Honolulu on a transfer of post.

Mr Chase had spent 11 years with the Hongkong office before he was transferred to manage APL in Kobe.

He will leave on Monday by plane. Mrs Chase will go to Honolulu later in the ex-President Cleveland.

Telephone Co clerk jailed for corruption

A clerk of the Hongkong Telephone Company, Wai Sau-king, 40, of 2 Danner-road, fourth floor, was sentenced to six months by Mr K. A. S. Phillips at Causeway Bay Court this morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of corruption.

Coolie jailed for snatching from beggar

A 35-year-old coolie Leo Kwong of no fixed abode was sentenced to six months' jail by Mr T. C. Chen at North Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning for snatching a pair of gold earrings and a purse from an old woman beggar.

Insp Wong Hei-man said the complainant Lau Yuk-hing, a 60-year-old beggar, was walking along Kaitak-road near Choi Hung-road on the evening of March 3 when the defendant approached her from behind and snatched a pair of earrings valued at $25, and her purse containing $25 and ran away.

A report was then made to the police and the defendant was arrested on May 24. He told the police that he had sold the earrings to a woman for $25 and had spent all the money.

He later helped the police recover the pair of earrings. Mr Chen ordered the pair of earrings to be returned to the owner.

Insp Wong also told the magistrate that the defendant had four previous convictions, three for drug offences and one for membership of a triad society.

Defendant admitted the snatching offence.

Identity cards

All persons living in Hongkong, Kowloon and Tsun Wan who hold identity cards bearing registration numbers in the series 230,001 to 233,000 are now required to re-register with the Commissioner of Registration for the issue of new-type identity cards.

The families of these people also have to re-register at the same time.

A Government order stated that this does not apply to holders of identity cards bearing the suffix "A" as the re-registration of persons with these identity cards will take place at a later date.

THE Harbour Office, during recent periodic inspection of the moorings of the buoys, has made a very interesting discovery on the bed of Hongkong harbour—a wreck which so far no-one has been able to identify, and which must have sunk well over 30 years ago.

The wreck which may be that of a steamer or a sailing vessel, is built of steel and lies bottom up. It projects about six feet above the bed of the harbour between buoys B2 and B8—where the normal depth of water is about 32 and a half feet. The wreck will have to be removed, however, and a Chinese firm has agreed to attempt to salvage the steel hull for scrap, and level the harbour bed.

Hongkong is a place of welcome and, alas, good-byes. Regret is always felt when a popular and well-respected older resident bids farewell.

This morning Mrs George Grimble is leaving home on the Blue Funnel steamer Menelaus. After more than 42 years residence in Hongkong Mrs George Grimble has earned a well-deserved title among many, of being the kindest and most helpful of friends. Her late husband was the founder of Geo Grimble and Co.

Mrs Grimble was a staunch member of the St John's Cathedral's Women's Guild and she was also on the council of the Helena May Institute for more than eight years.
